proved beyond doubt that only harmony prevailed. Men and women rushed up to the pulpit and embraced him. Many wept in their regret over loss of both pastor and church. When Mr. Gallant asked them to accept his resignation not a voice was lifted, and the matter was left without action.

The membership of the church was sixteen when Mr. Gallent became its pastor eight years ago and the debt was $16,000. He paid off $4,000 of the debt and increased the membership to 125. His sons had promised, if they were successful, to pay off the debt and huild him a $50,000 church, but their failure put an end to his hopes and he realized that it was necessary to disband the congregation.
